CHRISTIAN'S DEATH TO STOP FOOTBALL FOR GEORGETOWN

University Authorities Cancel Remaining Games in Tribute to Virginian.

STUDENTS AT MASS PRAY FOR HIS SOUL

Gloom Cast Over Local School by Accident—Body to Be Taken Home Today.

Results of Latest Football Fatality

Georgetown cancels all remaining football games. Coroner Nevitt orders inquest. Major Richard Sylvester orders investigation of charges of brutality by the police. Capt. James F. Oyster is of the opinion no action will be taken by the Board of Education, of which he is chairman. Georgetown undergraduates and faculty pray for dead athlete at high mass and send telegrams of condolence. Body accompanied by escort from Georgetown to Richmond, where funeral will probably be held Tuesday. Father of young Christian removes all blame by assuring Georgetown's representative he believes it was simply an accident.

Coming here less than forty-eight hours ago a thoroughly trained athlete, eager to uphold the traditions of the university at which for generations his family has been represented, Archer Christian today lies lifeless at the Georgetown University Hospital.

In one of the quiet, clean, little rooms of the red brick building at the corner of Thirty-fifth and N streets his body awaits the hour to be removed to the train that will take it to Richmond, the home of the Christians for years.

At 3:40 o'clock this morning the big Virginia player, whose heroic fight in the shadow of death gave his devoted family the right to hope against hope, breathed his last. So sorrow stricken are the members of his family and his immediate friends that no definite arrangements have been made for the funeral. This afternoon the body was prepared for removal to Richmond, and the presumption is that the interment will be made Tuesday in the family plot there.

THREE HOURS ON TABLE.

For nearly three hours last night Christian lay on the operating table while the deft fingers of the skillful surgeons available from this city and Baltimore flew fast and faster in an effort to save his fast-fading life. At 11 o'clock Dr. S. H. Watt and Dr. Harvey Cushing, who was summoned from Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, as soon as the seriousness of the boy's injuries was realized, had completed their task, and announced that the patient was doing as well as might be expected under the circumstances, but that his chances of surviving were small.

Less than four hours later young Christian was dead. The immediate

BEREAVED WOMEN CROWD THE SCENE OF MINE DISASTER

Families of Underground Workers Hold Little Hope. 400 Missing.

RESCUERS WORK TO OPEN SHAFT

Origin of Explosion Still Remains Mystery—Union Demands Investigation.

SPRING VALLEY, Ill., Nov. 14.—Thousands of persons are crowded today around the mouth of the mines where it is certain that more than 400 men have lost their lives. The scene was pathetic in the extreme.

Among the earliest comers were women, and many of these had been made widows and childless alike by the explosions yesterday.

With all the excitement, pathos, and confusion attending Illinois' great mine disaster—and what may prove to be one of the greatest catastrophes in the history of the United States—it is impossible even on this, the second day, to accurately estimate the number of lives lost by the great subterranean explosion at Cherry, Ill.

FOUR HUNDRED DEAD. It is certain that 400 men are dead. Perhaps there are more. Six of them died in their heroic attempt at rescue. The remainder are either burned or suffocated to death. All the shafts to the mine are still closed, but willing hands are striving to open the sealed shaft.

Scene of Wild Chaos. The scene today is one of wildest chaos; with men and women working to save those supposed to be yet imprisoned in the bowels of the earth. Widowed mothers and fatherless children are rushing about the scene crazed with excitement. Although every precaution is being taken to ameliorate the situation, the constant terrorizing condition of affairs continues.

The officials of the railroad are in a quandary. They are going from house to house—from woman to child—encouraging, buoying hope, offering every possible bit of encouragement. The disaster wipes out practically the whole of the mining colony. And it is not even certain that the bodies will ever be recovered. They are buried, many fear, beyond the hope of exhumation.

Origin Remains Mystery. Although the situation is one of complete dissatisfaction today as far as investigating the causes and results of the fire are concerned. The fire was caused either by the explosion of mine dust in the lower levels or by the explosion of a miner's lamp at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

About twenty men escaped by a hair's breadth, but when they reached the surface they were frightened and worn to a state of collapse. Even today they cannot tell what happened. These men (Continued on Eighth Page.)

GRAND JURY AWAITS PROBE OF BIG FOUR

Startling Testimony Promised in Warriner Case by Mrs. Jeanette Stewart, Who Says "I Will Show Up Some People."

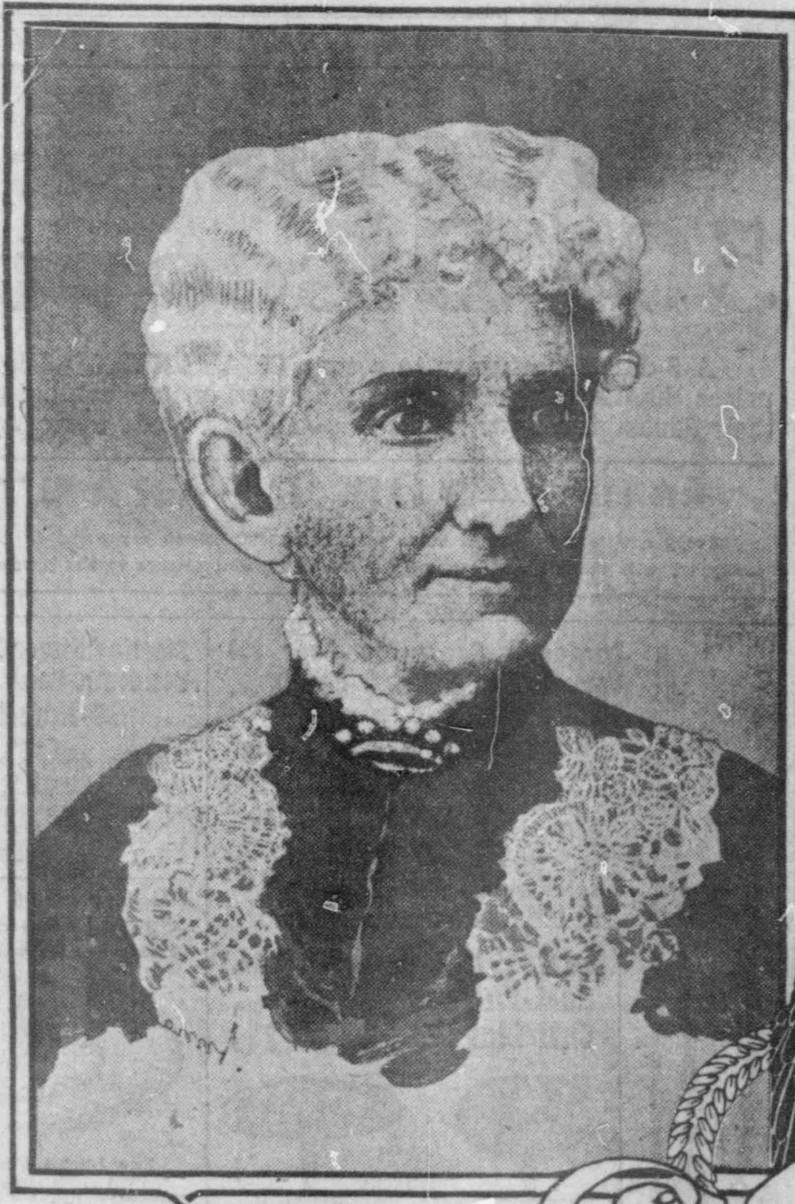

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 14.—The crisis in the C. L. Warriner-Big Four shortage case is rapidly approaching. Prosecuting Attorney H. T. Hunt has declared that the grand jury will begin its probe tomorrow morning at a special session and the Big Four general counsel, Judge L. J. Hackney, stated today that he has placed all the evidence in the case, including Warriner's signed confession, in the prosecutor's hands. A former employee of an automobile heavy concern patronized by Mrs. Jeanette Stewart, the woman in the case who has been under surveillance for some days, was tracked to the Sinton Hotel lobby. After a lengthy conversation in answer to a telephone call he was seen in the writing room of the hotel, where he scratched off a hurried note which he gave to a lad who immediately carried it to the Stewart apartments in the Sun Building. This was later learned to be a warning of a libel suit to be filed against Mrs. Stewart by a woman who has been described as knowing more about the case than Mrs. Stewart does.

The startling statements made by Mrs. Jeanette Stewart today in an interview has caused a sensation. She said: "I don't believe Warriner ever stole money of the Big Four. It would be unjust to give voice to my suspicions, but I know a whole lot, and at the proper time will make public what I do know. When I do, watch out, for it will be a sad day for some people who will reveal what I know. I have in my possession letters from Cooke, written from New York, Chicago, and Cincinnati.

"The letters will explain everything. And if they do not send me a summons to appear before the grand jury, I will produce these letters. I will go of my own accord. I won't attack any one unless they attack me. However, all I can say is that they had better let me alone, for what I know will make mighty interesting reading and show a few lights on this case that are not even suspected at the present time."

ALL EUROPE JOINS TO PROTECT KING

Secret Service Men From Many Countries Hunt Manuel's Enemies.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Picked men from Scotland Yard, assisted by 400 secret service men sent from Portugal, Spain, and France, have practically the entire western portion of the metropolis in a network today, as the result of information received yesterday from the Continent that leaders have recently formed an international organization of dangerous anarchists and nihilists now here in connection with a plot to assassinate King Manuel of Portugal.

Manuel arrives tomorrow morning from France for a state visit to King Edward at Windsor Castle for the openly avowed purpose of finding an English princess for a bride. The genuineness of the danger confronting the youthful monarch was learned today by the Munsey correspondent in the course of an interview with a highly placed official partly responsible for Manuel's safety while on English soil.

"Shortly after the arrival at Scotland Yard yesterday of the two famous members of the Spanish secret service," said the Munsey correspondent's informant, "the entire department turned out for a search of the lower quarters of the city where the foreign revolutionaries usually rendezvous in the hope of locating some dangerous characters who, (Continued on Second Page.)

ON REEF IN GALE; CREW FACES DEATH

Steamer Helpless in Teeth of Northeast Storm on Lake Superior.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 14.—Helpless against the fury of a northeast gale the steel steamer James Hoyt, of Duluth, owned by the Wolvin Steamship Company, lies on a reef in Lake Superior, twenty miles northeast of Bayfield, Wis. With a crew of twenty-five men facing death, the Hoyt is slowly being battered to pieces. William Chamberlain, a mate, and a sailor, battled with the storm for thirteen hours in a lifeboat, and reached Red Cliff, Wis., late yesterday afternoon exhausted. They brought to land the first news of the disaster, which occurred early Saturday morning.

It is showing and becoming hourly colder. If the storm does not subside soon there is little hope for the crew or the vessel, which lies on a rocky ledge, her prow three feet out of water.

PENSION CLERK SHOT BY UNIDENTIFIED MAN

Joseph C. Squires Meets Death by Bullet From Hunter's Gun.

Joseph C. Squires, a clerk in Pension Office, sixty-seven years old, living at 1701 Adams street northeast, was shot accidentally through the breast and instantly killed near his residence by one of two young unidentified white men who are supposed to have been hunters in the neighborhood, about 11 o'clock this morning.

According to Coroner Nevitt and the police, the hunters after the shooting became frightened and ran away. The police are trying to locate them this afternoon.

William Sartors, a boy in the neighborhood, told the police that just before the shooting occurred he saw Squires leave his home on Adams street and walk in the direction of the nearby woods. Before Squires had proceeded 200 yards, the boy says, there was a report from a gun. Instantly Squires dropped.

At the same time Sartors saw two young men apparently about the age of twenty running in an opposite direction. One of them carried a gun.

MUST FORTIFY ZONE, SAYS COL. GOETHALS

Canal Engineer Declares Only Time to Do It Is Now.

By WALTER J. FAHY.
Special Correspondent of the Munsey Newspapers With the Congressional Committee in Panama.

PANAMA, Nov. 14.—Standing on one of the high points overlooking this end of the big ditch which the United States is digging to connect the mighty oceans which wash the shores of the two Americas, Col. George W. Goethals, the engineer in charge of the construction of the canal, declared emphatically to the Congressional committee that the necessity of immediate fortification of the canal zone is imperative.

Too much money has been spent already and too many lives have been lost to America in the construction of this canal to permit it now to be exposed to any danger in order to save a few millions, he declared. If the fortifications are commenced now, with dozens of engineers on the ground and with thousands of laborers ready to do the work, the cost will be considerably less than if this is undertaken as an independent enterprise after the canal is completed, asserted Colonel Goethals.

To Show Weak Points. Tomorrow he will take the committee over the entire route of the canal and (Continued on Eighth Page.)

CARDINAL AND TAFT DRAW GREAT THROUNG

Celebration of Golden Jubilee of St. Aloysius Church Attended by Dignitaries of Catholic Church—Highest American Papal Official Presides at Mass.

Cardinal Gibbons, together with a group of the highest dignitaries of the Catholic church, today participated in the exercises commemorating the golden jubilee of St. Aloysius' Church, North Capitol and I streets.

Aside from the presence of these distinguished leaders of the church in America, the celebration was noteworthy because it attracted the President of the United States. Standing on the front steps of St. Aloysius Church, hat in hand and surrounded by Secret Service men and city guards attending the jubilee, President Taft smiled his acknowledgment of the crowd's hand-clapping and welcome as he bowed again and again as the procession of nearly 1,000 Catholics filed by. This was the concluding feature of the afternoon exercises. The fact that today's celebration marks a half century of life in a parish some seven thousand strong, and that each of the well remembered and beloved St. Aloysius rectors, living and dead, was paid a tribute, served to fill every seat in the church and lined the sidewalk outside.

Cardinal Gibbons' activities began this morning at 7 o'clock, when he said mass to 2,000 men, including 1,500 members of the Third Sunday League, which was founded by the Rev. Eugene McDonnell, rector of St. Aloysius. At this hour the church was reserved exclusively for men. Besides saying the mass Cardinal Gibbons delivered a brief address, admonishing his auditors to conserve moral truths and live with honesty and fidelity.

Cardinal Gibbons again presided at the solemn pontifical high mass at 11 o'clock.

The celebrant was Bishop Van De Vyver, of Richmond, while the sermon was preached by the Very Rev. F. J. Kearney, O. P., head of the Dominican order in the United States. The deacons of honor were the Rev. Rev. T. J. Spahan, rector of the Catholic University of America, and the Rev. Joseph Himmell, rector of Georgetown University. The Rev. Father Recter was assistant priest. The Rev. Charles W. Lyons, deacon; the Rev. James E. Becker, subdeacon; and the Rev. George A. Dougherty, of the Catholic University, master of ceremonies.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BEING THREATENED BY A REVOLUTION

Mrs. Eddy's Wonderful Spiritual Organization Imperiled by Controversy.

TWO SIDES MOVING TOWARD SEPARATION

Charges Against Mrs. Stetson Cause Storm's Bursting. Unity at Stake.

THE WHOLE Christian world has had its attention turned to New York and the religion of Christian Science these past two weeks. Sensational charges have appeared in the newspapers, almost daily, against one of the leading women of that faith—Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, builder of First Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York, and former associate reader with Mrs. Eddy in the mother church in Boston. The Munsey newspapers accordingly sent Mr. Albert to New York to get at the facts.

Mrs. Stetson was guarded by detectives and the leaders for and against her were giving out only the most formal statements. Notwithstanding this situation, Mr. Albert has been able to get at all the facts. And he has found that the charges against Mrs. Stetson are only the eruptions of a far more important issue beneath the surface—a struggle to fix the character of the branch churches of Christian Science, to determine if they shall be "administered by the common consent of the governed," as Mrs. Eddy has said, to decide if they shall have the Bible, Science and Health, and the Church Manual to read freely, or if they shall read them through the directors of the Boston church.

By ALLEN D. ALBERT, Jr.
Copyrighted, 1909, Frank A. Munsey.

THE most searching spiritual experience of my life has come to me out of the past week. It has come out of New York, hurrying, oil-stained, selfish, sensual New York. It has come out of an assignment that threatened rather the prey and defilement of harpies than promised aspiration for the soul. It has come out of a faith to which, in honest regret, I am unable to subscribe. It has come out of a crisis for that faith to 2,000 members of a great congregation, face to face as antagonists yet uniting their voices in prayer for the peace that passeth all understanding. It has come, you see, from a strange source.

Some of you who read will think it likewise strange that a study of the crisis which has come to these people should begin with a personal experience. But it is not strange at all. The religion of Christian Science, even more than other religions, has to do with personal experience. Every chapter in the story of this faith, every fruit of it, every step in the controversy which now imperils it, is rooted in just such experiences as mine. And so it follows that if Christian Science has now come or at any time shall come to a difficulty of the faith it will be no problem to be argued away on hypotheses; it will be a difficulty to reach to the head and heart and soul of the church and perhaps to endanger its life.

CAUSE OF STRIFE.

THE difficulty has come. After lowering for years, the storm of disagreement has burst about the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of New York city, and the person of its builder, Mrs. (Continued on Fifth Page.)
